Great idea and thanks for reaching out. Since things are sort of stalled out I wasn't sure what to do.

Are you recommending I send out a public update, or just an update to the PIO group?

Jeff is remaining on scene as FOSC, correct?

Laura: It might be a good Idea to push out a brief U/C PIO notification to the group, thanking everyone for their support and talk about how we are transitioning from an "Emergency Response" to a "Recovery Response," but letting everyone know that you will be quickly "getting the band back together" should there be a dramatic turn in the recovery...(Impacts to the Columbia, Fish & Wildlife Mortality, Tribal Concerns, etc.)

It's up to you....

Thank you! What is the company name of EPA's cleanup contractor? (Trying to keep all the organizations clear in my mind!)

Laura: For your "situational awareness" only! Just learned that EPA's cleanup contractors are scheduled to begin demobilizing from the I-84 Lindsey Lake spill scene on Thursday, 2/21.

Jeff Fowlow, our OSC, will sticking around for a bit. When I hear his expected "demob" date, I will let you know...

Subject: Lindsey Lake spill - Feb 16 public update

Draft below. Your review is appreciated!

Update: Feb. 18, time TBD p.m.
Cleanup activities continue and require several I-84 lane and nearby recreation trail closures.

The Oregon Department of Transportation will close one lane on I-84 eastbound beginning this afternoon so responders can clean up diesel exposed by melting snow on the eastbound road. One lane of I-84 westbound remains closed as well. A lane will be closed in each direction until cleanup operations are complete. Take alternate routes if possible.

Oregon Parks and Recreation Department has closed trails between Starvation Creek State Park and Lindsey Lake, just east of Viento State Park. The trail closures have been implemented because continuous air monitoring indicates there is a potential risk to human health. Please avoid the area and follow signs posted by Oregon State Parks.
